A Story of Interest

In September, 1914, the owner of Account No. 6133 in the South Paris Savings Bank made an initial deposit of ten dollars; since that time he has regularly added five dollars a month to that account. On June 15, 1924, the account amounts to $724.03, and more than $127.00 of that amount is interest.

Among the Farmers

"SPEED THE PLOW."

Planting a Tree.

What does he plant who plants a tree?
A scion full of potency;
He plants his faith, a prophecy
Of bloom, and fruitfulness to be;
He plants a shade where robins sing,
Where zefolge their nestlings swing;
A burning bush, a miracle!
Who plants a tree, he doeth well!

What does he plant who plants a tree?
He makes a strong mast for the sea;
He makes the earth productive, fair;
He helps the vines climb high in air,
And from their censers shed perfume
To sweeten night, and bless high noon.
Against the vandals who despoil
He sets his protest in the soil.

What does he plant who plants a tree?
An emblem of the men to be;
Who lightly touch terrestrial clay,
But far above the earth, away
From sordid things and base,
Incarnate ideals for their race.
Who plants a tree, he doeth well,
Performs with God, a miracle!

Influence of Good Dairy Sires.

A careful investigation, recently completed, shows that the dairy cattle of the United States may be divided roughly into three classes, with about one-third of the nation's cattle in each class. The poorest class does not pay for its keep, the next third returns a very small profit, and the best third carries the other two-thirds on its back, so to speak. The Department of Agriculture gives the average yield of milk per cow in the United States as 3,716 pounds. The average butter-fat production per year of these cows is probably about 160 pounds. This being the case it is easy to understand that only one-third of the individuals are really profitable.

How does the average production of your herd compare with the national average of 160 pounds? It is a safe bet that many of your cows show a much higher yield, but can you say the same thing of the average of your herd?

Now for another comparison. The average production of all pure-bred cows is high—very high in contrast with the average national production. The latest figures for the Jersey breed have come to hand, and they show that the average yearly production of all mature pure-bred Jersey cows on official test during 1923 was 577 pounds of butter-fat. These cows are owned in the great majority of cases by practical dairy farmers in all parts of the United States, and were tested under a wide range of climatic conditions.

Compare this figure, 577 pounds of butter-fat per year with 160 pounds of butter-fat per year, which is the average for the United States, to determine where your herd stands. Is it in the 500-pound class with the Jersey or is it tagging along in the 160 pound class of the average cow?

Look at the facts, make these reasonable comparisons, and it will be easy to appreciate the advantages of using only a good pure-bred bull of your favorite breed to build up the average production of your herd. In one generation a good pure-bred bull will make an astonishing improvement in your herd average; and a short period of years he will increase the average production of the poorest herd to a point where dairying becomes profitable. In addition, the use of a pure-bred bull affords the dairy farmer the satisfaction which comes from the knowledge that he is "getting ears in his own goods, mail order houses where the prices are much below those of retail stores, cooperative buying, parcel post delivery and quantity buying.

Consumers could well take advantage of one or more of these as a means of saving. The public should understand that it is itself largely responsible for the high cost of living because of the demands for table luxuries.

Best Indication of Good Milk.

Bacteria affect a milk supply more than any one factor. Flavor and odor, keeping quality, cleanliness and healthfulness, some of the qualities in which all milk should stand high, are affected by bacteria.

Milk, as drawn by the calf, is in the form nature intended milk should be consumed. Milk, as it comes from the cow, is very low in bacteria count. Man has been trying to keep milk as near this condition as possible, by fighting bacteria with cold, sterilization and cleanliness. The motive has not been to imitate nature but to prevent milk from souring. The best informed dealers now strive to produce as near natural milk as possible, because it also greatly improves the product.

A hair from the cow's body or a particle of chaff, when seen under the microscope, show large numbers of bacteria surrounding them. When these particles of hair and dust drop into the milk-pail, then we may expect a high bacterial count as the milk is seeded with bacteria which soon start unfavorable growths.

The presence of large numbers of bacteria in milk indicates careless methods were used. If only a few bacteria enter the milk, and the milk is kept warm, these bacteria will multiply rapidly and result in a high count.

Consequently, it is of utmost importance that care be taken; first, to keep as many bacteria as possible out of the milk; and second, to prevent their further development.—Forrest A. Barbour, State Dairy Inspector.

Mr. McIntire's Cows.

Three noteworthy production records were made recently in the herd of L. E. McIntire of East Waterford, by two of his purebred Holstein cows, according to an official announcement made by the advanced registry office of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

At the age of four years and eleven months, Mabel Lyons Oxbidge produced 585.9 pounds milk containing 22.437 pounds butterfat equal to 28.04 pounds butter in seven days, and in thirty days she produced 2,535 8 pounds milk containing 89.146 pounds butterfat equal to 111 43 pounds butter.

Nona Lyons Douglass, age three years and two months, produced 445.5 pounds milk containing 16.214 pounds butterfat equal to 20.26 pounds butter in seven days.

There are two general methods of obtaining productions—official test records and cow testing association records. The official test records deal with the purebred animal. The cow testing association records deal mainly with grade animals, but in many instances purebred animals are included. Nothing has been more beneficial to the breed of pure-bred dairy cattle than official records. Each year sees keener interest in the work. Dairy farmers are realizing more and more that official records add to the value of the animals for both sale and breeding purposes.

"Don'ts" for Preventing Forest Fires.

Some of the "Don'ts" advocated by the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture:

Don't leave a camp fire unwatched.

Don't ever drop a match without first making sure it is out and then breaking it in pieces.

Don't knock the ashes from your pipe, cigar, or cigarette without stepping on them and grinding them into the earth.

Don't throw inflammable articles from your automobile.

Don't fail to keep an eye out for the person who endangers your forests and your lives by doing things which are liable to cause fires.

Don't fail to report all such persons to the Forest officers just as you would any criminal.

More than 20,000,000 dozen eggs were handled by three California organizations marketing poultry products in 1923, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Approximately one-fifth the total quantity was sold in New York City.

In 1910 there were 151,322,840 apple trees in the United States. In 1920 the number had decreased 36,057,811. Peach trees during the same period had decreased 28,851,736, a percentage of 30.5 per cent.

The Farmer's Share in the Dollar.

(By Dr. W. H. Jordan.)

Two claims are frequently made, one by the farmer that he gets too small a part of the consumer's dollar, and the other from the housewife that she pays too much for supplies because somebody profiteers. Certain facts should be clearly understood. Profiteering probably exists, but it comes far short of explaining the situation.

The spread between the farmer's price and the consumer's cost is large. With four important foods it was shown by the Congressional Commission on Agricultural Inquiry to be from 62 per cent to 74 per cent, with men's suits 70 per cent and shoes 59 per cent. What are the causes of this large spread?

The first is the long road which many foods travel between the farmer and the consumer's table. The stages in that journey for many foods are the producer, the local market, the terminal market in the city, the manufacturer, storage houses, the wholesaler, the jobber, the retailer and the consumer. There are at least used in this service 17 types of equipment, 36 sources of cost for materials, 42 classes of employes and 19 types of management costs. An important element is freightage. A census showed that 9,476 cars of food stuffs travelled an average of 1400 miles each.

Manufacturing costs are an important item. In 1913 the manufacture of certain foods took from 32 per cent to 87 per cent of the prices which the wholesaler paid him outside of the cost of raw materials and in 1921 the proportion was 35 per cent to 68 per cent. Part of this cost was in advertising, ranging from 4 per cent of the wholesale price to 24 per cent. Between different manufacturers of certain commodities, it is a competition of spending as an ultimate tax on the consumer. Manufacturer's profits were found to range in 1913 from 4 per cent to 12 per cent and in 1921 from 1-2 of 1 per cent to 20 per cent. It should be borne in mind that this is the profit on the turnover of stock and not on the capital invested.

The retailer is responsible for a generous share of the consumer's costs. In 1913 he took from 21 per cent to 36 per cent of the consumer's dollar and in 1921 from 19 per cent to 32 per cent. His profits ranged from 3 1-2 per cent to 10 per cent, in 1913 and in 1921 from a loss of 1-4 of 1 per cent to 6 4 10 per cent. These are also percentages on the stock turnover, and the total profit depends on the amount of business.

One reason for this high cost is that the retail trade is overcrowded. In New York City the number of retailers has been found to be one to each 75 persons. The town of Orono with about 3200 fixed population has within its borders 12 concerns selling groceries, or one grocery-man to about 70 families. Much trade goes to Bangor. This overhead for the amount of business is very large.

A large item of expense with the ordinary retailer is the matter of delivery to customers. Labor prices are a large factor in food costs. Placing the average costs from 1910 to 1914 at 100, in October, 1923, the relative labor cost was 218, fabing improvement in your herd average; and a short period of years he will increase the average production of the poorest herd to a point where dairying becomes profitable. In addition, the use of a pure-bred bull affords the dairy farmer the satisfaction which comes from the knowledge that he is "getting ears in his own goods, mail order houses where the prices are much below those of retail stores, cooperative buying, parcel post delivery and quantity buying.

Consumers could well take advantage of one or more of these as a means of saving. The public should understand that it is itself largely responsible for the high cost of living because of the demands for table luxuries.

Poultry House Construction.

(By O. M. Wilbur.)

When one considers hens living in a climate such as we have in Maine, it must be remembered that they are living in a climate entirely unnatural to them. It should also be realized that when these hens produce eggs during the fall and winter months that they are producing these eggs out of season. To accomplish satisfactory results in egg production, therefore, the houses in which these hens live must be comfortable.

A house to be comfortable must provide certain conditions. First of all, the most important condition to be provided is dryness. Dampness in poultry houses comes largely from the hens themselves. Hens having a high body temperature breathe more rapidly and more air per pound of body weight than do other animals, and with a highly developed living system they give off a great deal of moisture through respiration. Unless sufficient ventilation is provided, this moisture coming in contact with the cold walls of the house in winter collects in the form of frost. Then during a warm period the frost will melt, making a damp condition in the house, and which will provide ideal conditions for colds and roup. Damp floors and litter in a poultry house are often caused by the house setting close to the ground. Damp litter is very detrimental, since hens will not scratch in it and will not get the exercise needed. This condition can usually be prevented by building the houses at least one and one-half feet from the ground, leaving it open underneath.

Ventilation is essential in a poultry house, not only to eliminate moisture but also to provide fresh air and to rid the house of foul gases and odors. Another important factor is sunshine. The house should face the south and the windows and opening in the south side should permit sunshine to strike all parts of the floor at some time during the day.

Besides being comfortable for the hens, the poultry house should be conveniently arranged so that it will require the least amount of time to care for the hens. It should be constructed as economically as possible.

The open front type of house, facing the south, built up from the ground and with the uneven pitch roof, provides all of these conditions.

An important point to consider in the open front type of house is the depth. Sixteen feet is considered a minimum depth for satisfactory houses of this type and one which is 18 to 24 feet deep is preferable, since they are warmer and the hens may be kept in larger flocks, thereby reducing the labor. In deep houses of this type it is advisable to put small windows in the north side of the house underneath the dropping boards. This tends to equalize the light on the floor and keeps the litter more evenly distributed.

When the principles necessary to provide comfort, convenience and a low cost in a poultry house are applied, the type of structure or kind of material is of less importance.

Two Thousand Apple Trees.

Two thousand trees of the standard varieties of apples were planted in Kennebec County this spring as the result of the community orchard planting plan conducted by the Extension Service and the Kennebec Farm Bureau, according to C. A. Day, county agent, in summing up the results of this particular project.

The apple trees were sent directly from the nurseries to the local project leader and he distributed them to the farmers. The varieties which have proven most popular this year are McIntosh Red, Delicious, Golden Delicious, Baldwin and Wolf River.

The largest number of the trees were ordered in Augusta, Benton, Gardiner and South Chinas.

Farm boys and girls grew over $1,088,000 worth of crops in 1923 in their 4-H club demonstrations of the best-known methods of production which they practice under the direction of agricultural extension workers, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture.

SOUTH PARIS

John T. Fagan, a well known Portland attorney, was in South Paris on legal business Thursday.

Miss Rena Tribon returned the first of last week from Machias, where she attended the graduation of her cousin, Miss Laura Tribou.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Rawson and Miss Doris Cole, with the end of the school year at Mexico, have come to South Paris and are at Harry D. Cole's, where they expect to spend the summer.

Frank E. Kimball, E. M. Millett, Dr. C. L. Buck, Elmer E. Stiles and R. E. Shaw attended the field day of the Patriarchs Militant at Auburn Wednesday. Mr. Kimball was one of six candidates from different parts of the state to receive the Degree of Chivalry that day.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Howard and sons Henry and Roland Howard started Sunday morning on an automobile trip to New York state, to be gone a week or more. They will visit Nathan A. Chase and family in Ilion, N. Y., and Miss Priscilla Chase will come with them on their return to make a visit here.

Mrs. G. Everett Peabody, who died at her home in South Portland on the 8th of June, was formerly as Miss Ruth Remick a teacher in the South Paris schools for two years. She was the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Remick, and was a niece of Mrs. George C. West of South Paris. About four years ago she married Mr. Peabody, who survives her, as do two children, the younger only a week old at the time of the mother's death. Her age was 31 years.

Cole & Clifford have installed, at their filling station in the Square, a visible gasoline pump. The gasoline is pumped into a glass cylinder, and the surplus runs off down to the measure for which the customer calls and for which the gauge is set. Then the measured gasoline is run off into the customer's tank. The customer sees exactly what he is getting, and doesn't have that slightly uncomfortable feeling that perhaps the pump isn't working right and he may not have got his full measure. Gasoline, though of so nearly universal use, is about the only thing one buys without seeing it, and this pump gives him a sight of it.

(Circular from War Department.)

It is not necessary to write to the War Department, the Navy Department, or the United States Veterans' Bureau, for blank forms of application for adjusted compensation, or for any information concerning it. Full information with regard thereto will be published in the public press and detailed information will be contained in the circular and will accompany each application. When the blank forms of application and the circulars shall have been printed, they will be immediately distributed throughout the country to the post offices, to the posts of the American Legion and other veteran organizations, to the American Red Cross Chapters, and to the Army and Navy recruiting offices, and Army and Navy posts and stations, for immediate delivery to all persons who desire to apply for the adjusted compensation. It is expected that copies of application and circulars of instructions will be available for distribution on or before June 30, 1924.

Cash payment of the adjusted compensation to those entitled to $50 or less will not be made prior to March 1, 1925. The adjusted service certificates will bear date January 1, 1925, or later, but, under the law, no loan can be made on the adjusted service certificates until two years after the date of such certificates.

The War Department, Navy Department, and the United States Veterans' Bureau have made extensive preparations to handle promptly all claims for the adjusted compensation. This great work will require the undivided attention of every employee, and it will be impossible to answer individual inquiries concerning the matter. Such inquiries would not only be useless; but to answer them would delay action on the claims. Claimants will aid materially if they will fill up the blank forms of application to the best of their ability in accordance with their own knowledge or recollection of the facts, and refrain from writing to the War Department, Navy Department, or the United States Veterans' Bureau, concerning adjusted compensation.

Harlan P. Wheeler.

After a long period of increasing feebleness Harlan P. Wheeler died at his home in Bethel on Sunday, June 8, at the age of 80 years. Mr. Wheeler was born in Bethel, the son of the late Daniel and Sarah Cummings Wheeler, and one of a family of twelve children. Some more than fifty years ago he married Miss Mercy Peabody of Gilead, who died about twenty-four years ago. Later he married Miss Edna Merrill of Gray, and she survives him.

He was a well known teacher, and for years superintendent of schools. For years he lived at Gilead, where he held important local offices, and he was at one time representative in the legislature from the Gilead class.

He was a veteran of the civil war, and was one of the few surviving members of Brown Post, G. A. R., of Bethel. He was a charter member and at the time of his death the oldest member of Bethel Lodge, F. and A. M. For a time during his latter years he was a resident of Portland, and there became a member of the Stevens Avenue Congregational church.

Besides his wife, he is survived by an adopted daughter, Miss Ruth Wheeler of Portland; and one brother, Lewis Wheeler, a resident of California, and many nephews and nieces.

Coolidge and Dawes.

The Republican national convention last week did its work well. The first part of its work was to nominate Calvin Coolidge for president. This was what every one knew was to be done, and it was done with only a rumble of dissent from the Lafollette faction.

The second part of its work was to select a candidate for vice-president. This was a case where the office was hunting the man, and a conspicuous instance of that condition. On the second ballot the convention nominated former governor Lowden of Illinois, but he utterly refused to accept. Gen. Charles G. Dawes was then nominated. The ability of Gen. Dawes has of late been well demonstrated, and his fearlessness was years ago shown beyond question or cavil. He is the type of man on whom we can confidently depend to make good if he should be called to the highest office in the land.

It's a good ticket, Coolidge and Dawes, and will command the support of all real Republicans.

Of course another important part of the work of the convention was the building of a platform, and this was also well done. The platform while necessarily long is clear and plain, and does not evade or obscure the issues, or present vague generalities, but succinctly states the position of the party.

Here and There.

The Mystic Shrine is the florescence of the Masonic order—a mob of persons crowned with red fezzes and gilt tassels, who take toll of good times, banquets on rich viands and floats around with gorgeous silk dresses out of which protrudes the head of a woman crowned not with a fez, but a tiara of precious stones perhaps, and to the music of high priced orchestras. It is the ambition of every Mason to arrive at this magnificence, and there is a liberal sprinkling of them in every community. They belong to a central temple but form clubs in the larger towns. There is one right here in South Paris and Norway. But as these nobles luxuriate, however, there is the skeleton at the feast—the poor we have always with us, and the unfortunate, so out of the richness of entertainment these are remembered. That is, a fund is set aside for this purpose. These thoughts are brought to the surface at this time because a few days since the corner stone of a $250,000 edifice was laid at Springfield, Mass., by this order, which is to be used as a hospital where the crippled children of New England, whose parents are unable to minister to their infirmities, may be helped, if help is possible. The Shrine has taken this as its special work. That there is need is evidenced by the record of a similar hospital in Atlanta, Ga., where in one year 374 children were admitted, 370 operations performed, 171 deformities corrected and 161 partly corrected.

Here's your chance, if you can write a play. The sponsors of the Portland Players, who open a season of stock at the Jefferson Theatre, Portland, the last of this month, announce a play contest open to residents of Maine or to those who were born in this state. The best play submitted will be given a tryout during the month of August by the Portland Players, and a production on Broadway in the fall. Some perhaps wholly unknown playwright is going to land on Broadway at one jump. But don't get excited over the prospect. Most of us couldn't write a play that would get by under any conditions. The contest closes July 15th.

Mary Roberts Rinehart, prolific writer and maker of almost-impossible situations into vivid realities, is to spend the summer at Ilesford, where she will do "nothing except rest." Yet she probably will use some of her resting time in discovering new life stories in the quiet atmosphere of a Maine coast vacation land.

This from the Boston Herald puts a volume into one short sentence, and is the best summary of the matter that we have seen: "As a failure prohibition stands side by side with matrimony, and human life."

Maine News Notes.

Rivaling the hand carved marvels of the far-famed Yankee pocketknife expert of early New England days were the exhibits of carving done entirely in ordinary box board material at the hands of ingenious American boys which was recently displayed at the Portland Boys' Club in a special exhibit and sale.

Interest in the MacLean homicide case at Brunswick, involving a Bowdoin student and his wife and infant child, is renewed by two suits filed by the wife, Nettie Volk MacLean, in her home state of Washington. One suit is for divorce from her husband, Kenneth Ross MacLean, and the other for alienation of affections against the husband's parents. In her declarations the wife avers that the husband kicked and otherwise abused her, and that he smothered the baby with a pillow.

Maine is one of twenty-four states whose white city dwelling wage-earners showed a lower tuberculosis death rate than the general urban industrial population of the United States, according to death claim figures just compiled by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company based on the 1923 mortality experience of its 15,000,000 industrial policyholders. The tuberculosis death rate for the United States was 90.5 per 100,000 white industrial policyholders, while that for Maine was 85.1.

East Sumner.

An unusual event occurred at the historic ancestral home of the "Deacon Robinson twins," widely known as "Martha and Mary," on Saturday, June 7th, it being their 79th birthday. Without any previous arrangement, four of their relatives happened to call on them. The remarkable feature was the advanced age of those present—S. Weston Briggs 76, Mrs. Lizzie Ross 77, "the twins" 79, W. Scott Robinson 84, Sharon Robinson 87, the combined age being 481, average age 80 years and two months.

Another peculiar thing is that the three men were civil war veterans, and one of the three ladies is a civil war widow. The three males are widowers, and two of the ladies are widows. Five of the six present were born in Sumner, and three still reside in Sumner. W. S. Robinson lives in Hartford, and is the only civil war veteran in town. S. W. Briggs resides at Bretton's Mills, and served in a Massachusetts Regiment when only about 16 years of age. S. Robinson served in the 23d Maine. Mrs. Rose resides also at Bretton's Mills, and is the widow of Volney Rose, who died early in the war.

The dinner was served in the house where four generations of the Robinsons have lived, said house now being 140 years old, and the first house erected from sawed lumber in town. Despite its age, it is still in good condition, giving little evidence of its age. The old saw mill, erected 140 years ago, is still in use, and has cut out this season over 175,000 feet of lumber.

The "twins" received a nice birthday cake bearing in pink the word "Twins" and the figures '45 '24, indicating the year of birth and the present date. The cake was made by Mrs. Charles Briggs, wife of the son of S. W. Briggs of Bretton's Mills. The "twins" also received many cards and some cash presents.

The six persons present, despite their advanced ages, are yet quite active and hope to meet again another year.

Speaking of twins, within the present delivery of East Sumner post office, the writer has known of five sets of twins being reared, viz., the Deacon Robinsons, the Leonard Robinson twins (Ella and Emma), the Joseph Robinson twins (Alexander and Lysander), and two pairs in one family, descendants of Meshac Keene, named Asia and Africa, and Lucius and Louise.

Bearce, for a few days, and are now with her sister, Mrs. Walter Conant, but will soon return to New York. Mrs. Lizzie Locke of Mechanic Falls is visiting her sister, Mrs. Mary J. Bearce.

Fred Cushman, who has been in very poor health for years, passed away very suddenly Tuesday night. The funeral was Friday afternoon. Mr. Cushman was a fine man, and will be greatly missed. Although he could get out but little of late we "knew he was there." He leaves a wife, Mrs. Edith Packard Cushman, one son Dwight, two daughters, Mrs. Clement Munce of South Paris and Miss Elizabeth Cushman.

The village school closed Friday. A picnic was held.

The commencement exercises at the academy closed last Tuesday afternoon with the alumni dinner at Sturtevant Home at 1 P. M. The address to the class, the best that has been given at Hebron for several years, was by Rev. J. Harrison Thompson, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Portland.

They are doing well and their markings are almost identically the same. It is needless to say that Mr. Hutchins purposes to raise the calves. The mother is a pure-bred Hereford, but is not registered. There is everything to indicate that the young animals will attain maturity, and it is probable that triplet calves do not exist elsewhere in Maine.

Like most fire departments Auburn's had been called upon for almost every kind of a rescue up until 5:30 Friday evening but the limit was reached at that exact minute when chief's call was sounded for the rescue of a pet raccoon, evading capture in the loftiest branches of a magnificent elm tree, Union and Manley Streets. After three-quarters of an hour of hide and seek, seven-in-seven-out and tag in the leafy branches, the frightened animal was finally captured.

This Democrat goes to press at just about the time of opening the polls for the primary election, and of course nothing indicates how large a fraction of the voters will attend to their privilege and their duty. If you happen to see this paragraph before nine o'clock in the evening, and you haven't yet voted, please accept this as a reminder that there is still opportunity. The polls do not close till nine o'clock.

News comes from Mrs. Arvilla Wise, formerly of this town, who when very ill made the trip by auto, on a cot bed, from South Paris to the home of her son, Dwight M. Wise, in Rockland, Mass., a distance of one hundred seventy-five miles, that she is much improved in health, being able now to sit up hours every day, though not yet able to walk about. Mrs. Wise enjoys her new home, which is situated eighteen miles south of Boston. She would be pleased to hear from any of her South Paris friends, or to welcome them at any time in her new home at "Elmhedge," 167 West Water Street, Rockland, Mass.

A set of new printed check lists have been prepared by the selectmen of Paris, and are being used for the primary election. This is the first list that has been printed since the town had two polling places. A rough count of the names by measurement of columns shows a total of 2303. This is only approximate, not accurate. Some day when somebody has nothing else to do, an exact count may be made. The approximate figures show 1783 voters in "Ward One," with polling place at South Paris, and 525 in "Ward Two," with polling place at West Paris. It will be interesting to see how these figures will compare with the number of votes cast in the primary election.

A familiar figure to South Paris people was laid to rest Saturday—the collie known to every one as "Nita." Nita was formerly owned by the late John F. Stanley, and made a record for herself when a buck deer attacked him at the Auburn fish hatchery, where he was superintendent, some years ago. The enclosure in which the deer were kept was forbidden territory to Nita, but she dug her way under the fence and attacked the deer in the rear. Although Mr. Stanley died in consequence of the attack of the deer, he was doubtless saved from immediate death by the dog's act. Since Mr. Stanley's death she has been at C. W. Bowker's. Because of her advancing age and infirmities, she was chloroformed and given suitable burial.

C. Herbert Flood.

C. Herbert Flood died on Thursday at the home of his son Clarence in Melrose, Mass., from the effects of a shock which he had sustained, and which was the fourth one he had suffered. Mrs. Flood had just returned from a hospital where she had undergone surgery.

Mr. Flood was 70 years of age. Much of his life was spent on a farm in East Oxford, but some months ago he and Mrs. Flood went to the home of their son in Melrose, without any definite intention of returning.

He is survived by a widow, who was before marriage Annie Porter, and two sons, Charles of Long Beach, Calif., and Clarence of Melrose.

Turned Hose on Billposters.

A South Paris woman has discovered an effective method of stopping the trespass of billposters on forbidden territory. One of the earlier circuses to visit Maine this season, by arrangement with the owner of a garage and another building, adorned (or otherwise) the said buildings with circus posters. This was not pleasing to the family living in the house on the next lot, who filed a protest with the owner of the building, and he gave courteous attention to what they had to say.

Later the advertising crew of another circus came along, and wanted to put their posters on the same buildings, but the owner steadfastly refused. The circus men remarked, "Well, if we should come along when you're not there and put up our bills, you probably wouldn't be very mad."

The building owner said to the woman of the house next door, who had protested, "If those men come to put up bills there, you drive them off." Which she did. The men came and went to work putting on their "paper," whereupon she connected the garden hose with the kitchen faucet, and from the vantage point of a second story window turned a stream on the trespassers, soaking at least one of them in good shape. It worked. They got one sheet put up, and then they went away from there.

In his sermon Rev. Mr. Miller defined the one thing needful as character, and enlarged upon the way in which the past, present and future are related, so that the past and the present, where man's nature is concerned, determine the future. In establishing that character, he urged, keep physically and mentally clean. Be truthful. Treat others honorably. Pay your bills. Have the moral courage to do and say what is right. Don't be ashamed to be known as a disciple of Christ. Finally, do unto others as you would that they should do unto you.

The singing was by the choir of the Universalist church, Miss Evelyn Wight soprano, Mrs. Agnes Perkins alto, Harry Conant tenor, C. S. Fuller bass, assisted by Mrs. Elsie Barnes, with Miss Nellie M. Jackson at the piano.

The class of 1924 of South Paris were marshaled by Lester Cushman of the class for the processional and the recessional. There are thirty-two members of the class, and all were present.

Boarding Places for Teachers.

To the People of South Paris:

Your school department is constantly striving to get the best teachers which our money can hire. In order for us to get the best teachers we must be able to assure them of good boarding places.

I am, therefore, asking any persons who could take a teacher to board to let me know as soon as possible.

I shall need boarding places for at least three teachers in the high school, and I am asked to locate a furnished rent for the new sub-master, Robert L. Jacobs.

I am sure the people are desirous of having our teachers in the best possible boarding places. I shall appreciate very much any help which you may be able to give me.

An Old-Fashioned Train Schedule.

Next Sunday, the 22d, the summer schedule goes into effect on the Grand Trunk, or more exactly the Canadian National Railway, and the arrangement of trains is somewhat like that which formerly was in force for a number of years, but is a little different from any of recent times. For the first time in many years, the forenoon trains will not meet at South Paris at 9:36. Trains will go east at 5:23 and 9:33 A. M. and 5:48 P. M.; west at 10:01 A. M., 3:30 and 10:28 P. M. The 9:33 A. M. train east and the 3:30 P. M. west run only on week-days, the others run daily.

For a Building at Springfield.

A number of Oxford County organizations and individuals have pledged support toward the raising in this state of a fund to match the state appropriation for the erection of a Maine building on the Eastern States Exposition Grounds in Springfield, Mass. The building, to be erected near the Massachusetts building, is to cost not exceeding $50,000. Of this amount the legislature last winter pledged $25,000, on condition that an equal amount be raised by subscription within the year.

B. W. Harriman, a brother of Merle Harriman, lecturer of the Maine State Grange, is now in Oxford County in the interests of this project. In every county the canvass is to be made this summer. The Maine Potato Growers' Exchange, with headquarters in Aroostook, headed the subscription list with a contribution of $1000. Other organizations devoted to agriculture or industry have pledged generously. The State Chamber of Commerce and Agricultural League is having general supervision of the canvass.

The erection and subsequent management of the building will be in charge of a committee composed of Commissioner F. P. Washburn of the Maine Department of Agriculture, Representative John W. Leland, president of the Maine Federation of Agricultural Associations, and three others to be named by the Associated Industries of Maine, the Maine Publicity Bureau and the publicity committee of the Maine Legislature.

The State Highway Commission is doing good work in keeping the public informed on what stretches of road it is conducting tarring operations. If there is anything that an automobile driver will avoid when he can, it is driving on a road which has been freshly tarred. Now that the bulletins are issued in advance of the work, those who wish can route their pleasure trips so as to avoid getting on the tar.—Bath Times.

During the four days from June 13 to 16 inclusive, Kent's Hill Seminary has been celebrating its hundredth anniversary, with a large attendance of graduates and friends. The centennial commemorates a hundred years of useful service of one of the best known educational institutions of the state.

The dispatch announcing that a freshman at the University of Maine killed a bear with a bow and arrow in the Maine woods is of interest, but loses a trifle of its quality of wondrousness when it is learned that the bear was in a trap, and that two shots with the bow were necessary to slay him.

Modern plumbing, including bathroom with hot and cold water, lavatory, shower, toilet and faucets in many convenient places—think what this means to the suburban or farm home.

With the present standards of living these conveniences are a necessity. They make for comfort, health, sanitation and labor-saving. They were formerly to be had only in the city, but now, will give you all the advantages of city water service. Duro Systems are built in many sizes and styles. They meet the needs of a bungalow or a country club. They are driven either by electric motor or gasoline engine.

DURO Water Systems

A duro system is worth all it costs for fire protection alone. It is easily installed in old or new homes—taking water from deep or shallow well, cistern or spring.

Ask us to point out the many reasons why Duro costs less but is worth more than any other water system you can buy.

A Tea Set and Tea with a Difference.

My tea set has always attracted considerable attention. Even the clerk who sold it to me looked surprised when I chose it. I got it at a Japanese store in Boston, and it is of that familiar Japanese luster-ware which is sold, very inexpensively, in all Oriental shops. But, here is the novelty of it—instead of having it all one color I chose one cup of each color in which the ware comes. I have a rose-colored, a mauve, a yellow, a Chinese blue, a moss green, and a brown cup, with plates to match. The teapot is rose, the creamer yellow, and the sugar bowl and cake platter are mauve. The shades blend beautifully, and the rainbow effect of the whole is both unusual and attractive.

It is a tea set with possibilities, for to intimate friends one can offer a cup expressive of the guest's personality, strangers are served with cups best suited to their gowns, and children like to choose their own color. In a colorful way, therefore, it helps make afternoon tea "just a little different."

After all, tea can be made a festive rite by simple changes. For instance, instead of serving the conventional cream or lemon, try lemon, cloves and maraschino cherries. The three make hot tea unusually delicious, and look very attractive when served in a three compartment dish. Fruit juices are pleasing substitutes for lemon slices in tea. Lime juice, or the liquid from preserved pineapple or peaches is luscious in hot tea, when a teaspoonful to a cup is used.

For a change it is interesting to use orange or lemon sugar. To prepare it rub block sugar over an orange or lemon until it has absorbed some of the oil, and consequently a pungent flavor of the fruit.

One of the novelties the war taught us during the sugar shortage was the use of orange marmalade in tea. It is delectable, and not at all reminiscent of war economies.

Simple cakes are best with tea, and hot muffins with honey or rolled toast are English favorites. Rolled toast is simple to prepare and looks very party-like. Butter thin slices of white bread, sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar or grated cheese. Roll the bread and fasten with a toothpick. Brown quickly in the broiler oven, turning the rolls in order to brown them on all sides. Take out the toothpicks before serving.

Myrtle frosting makes a plain cake interesting. Bake your favorite layer cake batter in a shallow cake pan. Cover very thin with white frosting, made of two cups of confectioners' sugar, and one teaspoonful of butter, melted with one tablespoonful of boiling water. Flavor with vanilla. When this has set, spread a coating of melted, unsweetened chocolate over it. Cut the cake in squares. You will find the double frosting delicious.

Value of a Home-Served Meal.

The university had closed for a few days' vacation between the spring and summer sessions, but M———, my roommate, and I were staying on for a few days to say farewell to friends on the campus before returning to our homes in the East. One evening as we entered the dining room, open to both faculty and students, we were attracted by a pale, sad looking youth, who seemed all the more forlorn because he had been seated at a table with three members of the faculty, who were so absorbed in their conversation that they did not realize that this boy was sitting with them. M——— instantly recognized him as M. B., a young Danish student who had been in some language class with her, and asked me if I were willing to have him join us. Of course I gave my consent, and it was a real joy to see his face light up when M——— asked him to come to our table. This little act of kindness affected him so deeply that at first he could not talk, and as he got control of his emotions, he told us why he felt this so strongly.

Coming to a strange country, with little money, he had broken his health in a brave struggle for an education. But he was not unhappy because he had been forced to work so hard—he expected to do this; it was because he longed for a glimpse of real home life—even a "home-meal" among friends would have meant much to him. A few university people in the town had invited him to dinner, but instead of taking him into their own homes and providing a simple meal in homelike surroundings, they had taken him to a hotel or cafeteria. No matter how simple the meal, how much more it would have meant to him if he could have eaten it in a home atmosphere.

As I knew of many other similar cases that year, that were only a little less sad because the students were from distant sections of our own country, instead of from a foreign country, I hope this story may reach every college and university town, and that the readers will see that every student, who cannot get home occasionally, is entertained at least once during the college year at a "home" dinner. Surely we are not going to let ourselves deserve the reputation which is so rapidly gaining ground, of being a country without home life. We all enjoy a change, and if your family usually dines at home, take them out to a hotel or tea-room occasionally—but if you are entertaining friends who do not ordinarily eat at home—especially if they are college students—take them into your own home and serve them a simple, home-cooked meal. You will find that you have added much to the happiness of your guest.

Ways to Use Cold Pancakes.

"I use them," writes our correspondent, "in two ways. First, after they are quite cold I cut them in very thin strips, like noodles, with a very sharp knife, put them in the soup tureen, and pour over them a well-seasoned beef broth. This makes, when served at once, a very good soup. My second way is to make them into a dessert. The cold cakes are spread with a mixture of sugar, ground cinnamon, and raisins, each pancake is rolled with the mixture inside, and they are placed in a baking dish in a row, and quite close to one another, milk is poured over almost to cover them, and then they are put in the oven and baked. This makes a very good pudding, not unlike a bread pudding."

How to Use Up Cold Bacon and Eggs.

Very delicious croquettes or meat balls may be made by putting the left-over bacon and eggs through the food chopper, chopping them so fine that their identity will be lost. Then mix with an equal volume of mashed potatoes, white or sweet, and if you have any other odds and ends, such as bits of celery, carrots, etc., these too may be chopped and added, but the bacon, potatoes, and eggs are all you will need. Mix with a little of the bacon gravy, form into croquettes, roll in crumbs, dip in beaten egg, roll again in crumbs, and fry in deep fat. Or make small balls and saute these on a hot, greased pan. Or flatten into cakes and brown on a hot pan. Serve with plenty of cress, and you will have a good breakfast or luncheon dish.

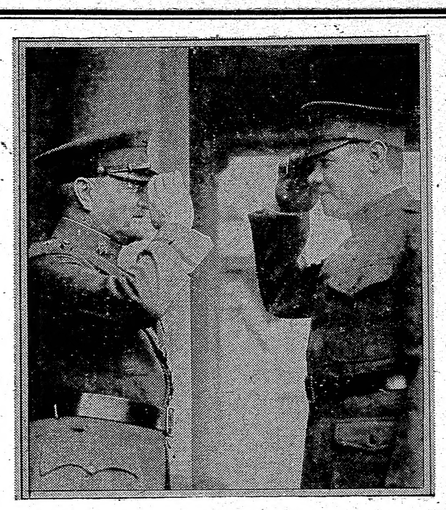
Pineapple Layer Cake.

Cream one-third a cup of butter, add gradually one cup of sugar, two eggs, beaten until light, one-half a cup of milk with one-half a teaspoonful of soda, and one cup and five-eighths of pastry flour, sifted with one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, and one-eighth a teaspoonful of salt. Flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake in two round, shallow pans, and when cold put pineapple filling between and on top of the cake. One-half of the rule for filling may be used, putting it between the two layers and sprinkling confectioners' sugar over the top.

PINEAPPLE FILLING.

Mix six tablespoonfuls of flour, two-thirds a cup of sugar and a pinch of salt. Add two egg-yolks, slightly beaten, then one-half a cup of pineapple juice and one cup and one-half of milk. Cook twenty minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly at first, then occasionally. Cool and add canned pineapple, which has been cut in small dice, using one cup and one-half.

Stewed celery eaten with the liquid in which it is cooked is excellent in cases of rheumatism and neuralgia.



Private Babe Ruth Reports to General Pershing.

Private Babe Ruth, recently acquired rookie of New York National Guard, arrived in the capital to report to his commander-in-chief, General Pershing. Anxious to appear in uniform, the Babe hustled around New York to find one big enough to fit him. He had no luck, so when the Yanks came to Washington he went to see the Quartermaster General about it and he fixed him up.
